

What is Dependent Eligibility Verification?

A dependent eligibility verification program (DEV) is a review of an employers health benefits plan to confirm that enrolled dependents are actually eligible to receive coverage. When enacted, this service will:

- Reduce overall healthcare costs by eliminating claims paid for ineligible dependents
- Mitigate the risk of incurring a high cost ineligible claim
- Assist firms in complying with laws and regulations related to operating a benefit plan as designed and avoiding costly fines and penalties.

What data should I consider involving this service?

5-8% of all covered individuals are ineligible:

- 20% Unaware of Coverage
- 30% Fraudulent Activity
- 50% Misinterpret Rules

Covering ineligible dependents will increase costs associated with the pandemic

Due to COVID-19, the delay of preventive care screenings and ongoing treatment services means employers will experience a large number of high-cost claimants in the future. Stop-loss carriers WILL deny any and all claims of this nature submitted on behalf of ineligible dependents.

Recent Verifi1 client results at conclusion of program

- 1 Ineligible claim of $250,000 became the employer's responsibility
- 75% of ineligibles were high utilizers; had claims within 12 months of removal
- 1 in 12 had claims over $10,000 within 12 months of removal
